Glaciers are sentinels of climate change. They are one of the most visible alarms of global warming today. In this panel discussion, Jiabao Li and collaborators Lindsay Clark and Cooper Galvin will welcome you into the creative process of the series of works created on glaciers in Alaska. "Glacier's Lament," filmed on the Mendenhall Glacier, is music and dance choreographed from the data from glaciers melting in the past 60 years. This series embodies the stunning beauty, rapid change, fragility, destructive power, and magnificence of glaciers. At the same time, it challenges the audience with the dramatic, irreversible ecological damages from climate change.
